VICTORIA PASSES AWAY

DEATH OF THE HONORED QUEEN AND MOTHER.

End of the Longest Reign in British History—Dying Sovereign Surrounded by Children and Grandchildren.

LONDON, January 22.—Queen Victoria died surrounded by her children and grandchildren shortly after 6 o'clock this morning.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—7:07 p. m.—The text of the Prince of Wales' dispatch to the Lord Mayor, announcing the death of the Queen is as follows:

"OSBORNE, 6:45 p. m.—My Beloved mother has just passed away, surrounded by her children and grandchildren. ALBERT EDWARD."

COWES, Jan. 22.—The Queen is said to have bade farewell in a feeble monosyllable to her family assembled at her bedside at midday. She first recognized the Prince of Wales, to whom she spoke a few words of great moment; then Emperor William and the others present filed past and heard a whispered good-bye. All those in the bedroom were in tears.

BERLIN, Jan. 22, 3:20 p. m.—The correspondent of the Associated Press here learns from an official source that Queen Victoria recognized Emperor William when the latter went to her bedside yesterday, by giving a sign of joy. She was unable to converse with him.

It is not known how long the Emperor will stay in England.

COWES, Jan. 22.—With the members of the royal family gathered at the Queen's bedside, the Bishop of Winchester and the rector of Whippingham read prayers for those in extremis. Happily the Queen was able to recognize those around her. They came to her bedside, but the physicians had warned them against attempts to speak to her.

Naturally, the family, while recognizing the claim for public information, insists that the details of the events around the death-bed shall be sacred to the present, and imposed the strictest secrecy on the whole household.

The arrival of Lord Clarendon (the Lord Chamberlain) is considered ominous, because the arrangements for the succession to the throne will be in his hands.

COWES, Isle of Wight, Jan. 24, 1:30 p. m.—It has been decided that the funeral of the Queen will take place at Windsor Castle February 2. The body of the late Queen will be removed from Osborne House February 1. It was the expressed desire of the Queen that the funeral should be military in character. Several officials arrived from Osborne today, bringing the state regalia. It was carried in a barge bag. A salute of twenty-one guns was fired here at noon today in honor of King Edward VII.

THE DOWAGER EMPRESS.

HOMBURG, Jan. 24.—The condition of the Dowager Empress Frederick continues satisfactory. Lately she has not suffered any pain, but this does not imply improvement. However, Her Majesty's sorrow and personal loss, owing to the respect and admiration she has borne with comparative fortitude.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 25.—The Czar left Ljvadia yesterday on the royal yacht, taking a trip for Sebastopol, leaving in the evening for St. Petersburg, where the court goes in mourning.

WILL MAINTAIN PEACE.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—In her last lucid rally before death, the Queen summoned the Prince of Wales and the Kaiser to her bedside and besought them, as they loved her, to avoid war and maintain peace. The Prince and the Kaiser knelt and swore to do all in their power to maintain peace, never to allow England and Germany to clash, and to endeavor to induce all other nations to do likewise.

WASHINGTON, January 23.—The news of the death of Queen Victoria was conveyed to President McKinley simultaneously with its receipt by the newspapers. Although he had been kept constantly advised of her condition since it became known that her death was a great shock to him. As soon as word was received from Ambassador Choate the President will send a message of condolence to King Edward VII. The official announcement is expected at any moment.

WASHINGTON, January 23.—Secretary Hay, upon being assured through the physicians' certificate, as furnished him by the Associated Press, of the demise of Queen Victoria, promptly cabled the following message to Ambassador Choate, at London:

"Choate, London: You will express to Lord Lansdowne the profound sorrow of the government and people of the United States at the death of the Queen and the deep sympathy we feel with the people of the British Empire in their great affliction."

"JOHN HAY."

The flag on the executive mansion was placed at half-mast at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon. So far as any record goes, this is the first time in the history of this country that this mark of respect has been paid to the memory of a foreign ruler.

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—A dispatch to the "World" from Rome says: The Pope received the news of the Queen's death through Cardinal Rampolla. His Holiness said not a word, but dropped on his knees to pray, remaining in this attitude for a considerable time. Afterwards he gave orders that in all churches prayers for the Queen be offered on tomorrow.

The Pope will be represented at the funeral by Cardinal Vaughan.

SENATE PASSES RESOLUTIONS.

WASHINGTON, January 22.—In the Senate this afternoon Mr. Allison offered the following resolution:

"That the death of her Royal and Imperial Majesty, Victoria, of noble virtues and great renown, is sincerely deplored by the Senate of the United States of America."

The resolution was adopted unanimously.

LAST HOPE DISPELLED.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—The latest bulletins previous to the announcement of the Queen's death especially those sent by the Prince of Wales, dispelled the last gleam of hope, the crowd's abiding hope, that the Queen would survive. The news of her death was received in front of the Mansion House, and only a few groups awaited the appearance of the final, inevitable announcement.

LONDON, Jan. 23, 1 p. m.—The King-Empress entered his capital at 12:55 p. m. and proceeded to Marlborough House. After attending the first privy council at St. James' Palace at 2 p. m. when a decision will be reached regarding the public proclamation of his succession, his Majesty will proceed to the House of Lords for the meeting of Parliament.

At the meeting of the privy council the King took the title of Edward VII, King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and Emperor of India.

LONDON, January 24.—Prime Minister Salisbury's absence from Osborne House during the Queen's last moments has not been publicly explained, and causes widespread speculation, especially in court and political circles.

According to information that has reached your correspondent through a sure channel, Lord Salisbury remained away owing to the strained personal relations between him and the present King.

The Times in an editorial on the new King partial affords a clue to the mystery where it says:

"We shall not pretend that there is nothing in his lengthy career which has not been publicly explained, and which could not wish otherwise."

These warning words are said to refer not to the Mordaunt case of thirty years ago, nor even to the Tanby Court scandal, but to a more recent episode, concerning which the Marquis of Salisbury, on behalf of the Queen, read the Prince of Wales a severe lecture, which accounts for their reported unfriendly relations.

The serious aspect of this matter is that under such a condition of things Lord Salisbury's tenure of the Premiership cannot endure long, and then a Unionist government will go to pieces.

Alexandrina Victoria was the only child of Edward, Duke of Kent. She was born at Kensington Palace on May 24, 1819, her mother being Victoria Mary Louisa, the fourth daughter of Francis, Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Saalfeld and sister of Leopold, late King of the Belgians. When Victoria was 18 years of age she ascended the throne.

On her accession to the throne the young queen found Viscount Melbourne at the head of the Government, and during his premiership and with the cordial assent of her subjects she became a wife. On the 16th day of January, 1840, while opening Parliament in person, she announced her intention to marry her cousin, Prince Albert of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, a step which she trusted would be "conducive to the interests of my people as well as to my own domestic happiness."

Five daughters and four sons were born of this her only marriage.

Appropriate local observances in honor of the dead Queen of Great Britain will be arranged as soon as official advice are received by the British Consul and others. The news was a great shock in spite of the advance of yesterday, indicating that death was near.

Within half an hour after the arrival of the Sonoma, with news of the Queen's death, a number of flags were at half mast about the city, and some business houses closed their doors. The firm of Theo. H. Davies and company closed all its buildings and offices shortly after one o'clock, suspending business for the day.

GOVERNOR NOT YET HEARD.

Governor Doke had not heard of the death of Queen Victoria at press hour this afternoon. He went to his Diamond Head residence this morning and at that place has no telephone. He will almost certainly proclaim a holiday for a day later in the week, so far as government offices are concerned, and will display the flags at half mast on the government buildings.

BERETANIA STORM SEWER

OPENED AND FOUND CLOGGED WITH EARTH.

Explanation of Why Yards at Corner Punched and Beretania Are So Frequently Flooded.

Vincent & Bolser have been employed to clean out the storm sewer between Punched and Beretania, and a point nearly opposite the residence of H. W. Schmidt, where the sewer takes a turn seaward. It may be a surprise to many that the sidewalk above and below Punched street is undermined and carries a substantial and perfect storm sewer. The sewer is nearly square in shape, about three feet high and something more than that in width. It is covered from end to end with heavy timbers, which support the sidewalk above.

In the two great storms of November yards in this neighborhood were flooded in some of them the water was nearly to the top of the steps and in all but a few would float without danger to their bottoms. People got mad, but kicking was all the satisfaction they had at the time. Had they known the truth—that there was a competent sewer at hand which was being handled and on account of the carelessness of somebody—they would have been madder.

The true situation came to light when the sewer was opened. The sidewalk was taken off at the Walkiki end. Then the timbers were removed and disclosed the fact that the sewer was so choked with mud that not a gallon of water could pass through and probably had been in that condition for years.

Wagons were at once ordered and about fifty feet of the sewer was cleaned out yesterday. In another section of the walk is being handled and by tomorrow night the entire sewer by Punched street will be in shape. The lateral branches will then be followed out and opened.

The sewer is undoubtedly one of the best in the city. Its bottom and sides are carefully cemented. It is big enough to carry off a horse, and it seems a kind of shame that the people for whom it was intended have been deprived of its services so long. Indications are that it has been stopped up three or four years. In the meanwhile every heavy rain has flooded the neighborhood yards and the only recourse of the people was to sit down and let the waters sink into the ground or dry up.

In another week the sewer will be in perfect shape. It was a bad idea in the first place to have it under the sidewalk, but now that it is there it will have to be left. A fine bituminous sidewalk is to be laid over the sewer when the work of renovating it is completed.

PROCLAIM EDWARD KING

PRINCE OF WALES BECOMES ENGLAND'S HEIR.

Ceremonies Witnessed By An Immense Crowd at London—Brilliant Scenes Attending Proclamation.

LONDON, January 24.—London today was given a glimpse of medieval times. The grand ceremonies with which King Edward VII was proclaimed at various points of the metropolis exactly followed ancient precedents. The officials purposely arranged the function as a foretaste of the published announcement and the inhabitants when they awoke were surprised to find the entire way between St. James' Palace and the city lined with troops. About 10,000 soldiers, Life Guards, Horse Guards, Foot Guards and other cavalry and infantry regiments, had been brought from Aldershot and London barracks after midnight. All the officers had crepe on their arms and the drums and brass instruments were strewed with crepe.

The troops in themselves made an imposing spectacle, but they were entirely eclipsed by the magnificent spectacle presented by the officials of the College of Arms.

The ceremonies began at St. James' Palace, where at 9 o'clock Edward VII was proclaimed King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and Emperor of India. The proclamation, which was read by William Henry Weldon, King-at-Arms, since 1894 and formerly Windsor herald, was as follows:

"Whereas, It has pleased Almighty God to call to His mercy our late sovereign lady, Queen Victoria of blessed and glorious memory, by whose demise the Imperial crown of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland is solely and rightfully come to the high and mighty Prince Albert Edward, we therefore, the lords, spiritual and temporal, of this realm, being assembled in which those of her late Majesty's privy council, with numbers of other principal gentlemen of quality, the Lord Mayor, Aldermen and citizens of London, do now hereby, with one voice, consent of tongue and heart publish and proclaim that the high and mighty Prince Albert Edward, by the grace of God, King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, defender of the Faith, Emperor of India, in which he acknowledges all faith, and constant obedience with all hearty and humble affection, beseeching God, by whom all Kings and Queens do reign, to bless the Royal Prince Edward VII with long and happy years to reign over us."

The King was not present. There was a large assemblage of officials and college heralds. Among those in attendance were General Roberts and members of his headquarters staff and other army officers. There was a great number of people from the commencement to the close. The proclamation was greeted by a fanfare of trumpets.

The officials then marched in procession from the balcony through the palace to the Ambassadors' court, where a number of royal carriages had been placed by the direction of the King at the disposal of the Earl Marshal. These took the officials who read the proclamation to the city, escorted by a detachment of Horse Guards, forming a picturesque and gorgeous procession.

The contingent from the College of Arms was composed of three heralds, four heralds and eight pursuivants. The costumes of the two latter were gorgeous beyond compare. They wore tabards a garment resembling the costume of Kings as depicted on play-bills. The tabards were blue and silk lions, the royal coat of arms and flowers in bewildering confusion. There was the rouse dragon, the blue mantle and the maltravers, with all the armorial bearings of that quaint old body, the College of Arms, in full and solemn array.

A blaze of trumpets announced the progress of the cavalcade as it proceeded through Trafalgar square and the Strand. The chief interest of the morning centered in the entrance of the heralds' procession into the city at Temple Bar. There grey minarets of the law courts and the tall spires of the Strand churches loomed, phantom-like out of the fog, while a long double line of over-erected troops stood, chilled and motionless, along the half-deserted streets. The clocks in the law courts and St. Dunstan's tolled out mournfully the quarter hours until 9:15 when out of the grey mist from within the city boundary appeared a procession of carriages forming the Lord Mayor's cortege.

It was there that the two processions were to merge in kaleidoscopic grandeur. The Lord Mayor, Sheriff Alderman and macebearers, in scarlet, fur-trimmed robes, cocked hats, ruffled shirts, silk knee breeches and low, buckled shoes, peered out from the Cinderella-like coaches that would have been down contemptuously upon the soldier, herald and peer. In the old days a veritable barrier gate separated the two from without. Today ten strong policemen stretched a red silken rope across the thoroughfare in honor of the city's ancient privileges.

As the clocks struck the time the officer in command of the troops cried "Attention!"

The rifle stocks came down with a click upon the asphalt pavement, and two gold-headed trumpeters appeared at the Griffin's side. The Lord Mayor and Sheriff, macebearers, chaplain, remembrancers and the white-robed judges of the city courts left their carriages and knotted themselves together between the lines of drawn up troops.

Then the city marshal, who was on horseback, wearing a uniform of scarlet gold-laced with scarlet pinnies, rode up to the barriers, and the king-at-arms, whose green and gold tabard outshone those of his colleagues, appeared at the imaginary bar. His trumpet blew a shrill blast, which the Lord Mayor's trumpeters answered and the city marshal rode up to the barriers and demanded, "Who goes there?" The king-at-arms answered that it was the King's herald, come to read a proclamation.

"Enter, herald," said the marshal and the herald was conducted to the Lord Mayor and Aldermen, who were still grouped in the street.

The herald then read the proclamation, to which the Mayor and Aldermen replied:

"We, with one voice, consent, tongue and heart, pledge allegiance to King Edward VII."

The trumpeters blew a blast while the wondering crowd stood breathless and silent, not knowing what to do until a military band in the procession struck up "God Save the King." This familiar air has still but one meaning in England and the crowd took up the words loudly with "God Save the King" on the tongue but with "God Save the Queen" in mind.

A few streets further on the proclamation was read again and the procession advanced, by way of Ludgate Hill, to the Royal Exchange. The final proclamation was made in front of the Royal Exchange. The square before the Exchange, with the prisonlike walls of the Bank of England on one side and the massive official residence of the Lord Mayor on the other, was a stage-setting whose age and solidity befit the portentous ceremony. There were no decorations except flags all half-masted, save the city's red cross on a white field over the Mansion House.

The royal standard hung above the Exchange, and over the surrounding business buildings flew the union jack. Black was the universal color worn by the people. Hardly a bright bonnet or gown relieved the somberness of the crowd. Soldiers and policemen formed an almost solid lane down Cheapside, where the pavement was to pass. The people behind them, crowding for sight over their shoulders, was of all classes, from the prosperous brokers to East End costers. The mass was subdued and remarkably orderly, an impressive contrast to the usual London holiday crowd. The roofs of the Exchange, bank and Mansion House and the windows and balconies overlooking the scene were filled with solid rows of people. Big policemen kept a clear space in front of the Exchange, which was disappointingly short, though gorgeous, swept down from Temple Bar at a rapid pace and was received silently.

The officials entered the Exchange by Cornhill and appeared on the top balcony, the Lord Mayor, with the sword-bearer, leading Sheriff Alderman, Recorder and City Marshal following. A flourish of trumpets impressed silence upon the crowds and the Lord Mayor, uncovering, stepped forward. All hats came off and the men remained bareheaded throughout the ceremony, under the misty rain, for nearly half an hour. The Lord Mayor's voice was strong and his oratorical words were distinguishable a block away while he read the warrant of the Privy Council to the herald. Thereupon the spectacularly attired herald, bareheaded also, for the third time, delivered the proclamation. Probably no one fifty feet away heard his words until, at the end, he raised his voice and shouted: "God save the King," putting particular stress on the words.

When the Lord Mayor finished reading the warrant with the cry, "His Majesty, King Edward VII," the crowd for the first time cheered feebly, but without unison, seeming to feel that no great display of enthusiasm for the King might appear to partake of disloyalty to the memory of the departed Queen.

It was only when the herald shouted "God save the King."

RETURNS BY SONOMA.

Miss Clara Palecki returned on the Sonoma after a visit of seven months to relatives in California.

OLAA.

It is stated by officers of Olaa plantation that the forthcoming report by the manager will make a good showing for the plantation.

MCCARTHY SETTLED.

William McCarthy, the sailor boarding house man who attached the clothing of a sailor a short time ago and was fined $100 in the United States district court therefor, has paid his fine. Judgment had already been rendered when he walked into court and paid the amount.

HE WANTS DAMAGES.

THE SONOMA ARRIVES

PASSES THE HONGKONG MARU ON THE WAY.

She Makes the Trip From San Francisco in Less Than Six Days—Many Passengers.

The new steamship Sonoma, with Captain K. Van Oeverdorp, formerly of the Alameda, as master, arrived at about noon today from San Francisco, having made the trip well within the six-day schedule, in spite of 36 hours of very bad weather at the start. She brought one of the largest lists of passengers that ever came here on one steamer, having 193 cabin passengers and 114 Honolulu passengers altogether. Her sailing time was about 5 days and 19 hours.

The Sonoma passed the Hongkong Maru on the way here. The Japanese steamship left San Francisco about an hour ahead of the new liner. A heavy northerly gale compelled the Sonoma to go half speed for the first 36 hours. She shed the storm well, and the passengers speak highly of her as a passenger vessel. G. A. Hodson, formerly purser of the Moana, is the Sonoma's purser. The Sonoma is a vessel of 8253 tons register, very much like the Sierra in her fine appearance and splendid interior finishings. She leaves here at midnight for the Colonies.

The list of Honolulu cabin passengers is as follows:

Miss Alexander, A. H. Bachelder, Mrs. C. D. Badgley, H. P. Baldwin and wife, Mrs. G. L. Bancroft, Mrs. H. A. Borthwick, E. Brown and wife, E. H. Bull, Mrs. L. H. Burns, S. B. Cannell and wife, G. R. Carter and wife, Mrs. R. Catton and two children, Miss Catton, Dr. E. S. Chapman and wife, C. D. Chase, L. Chase, W. G. Cooke and wife, L. R. Crawford, Mrs. W. E. Davis, C. S. Denby, James Doyle and wife, C. E. Dyke, wife and maid, George E. Fletcher, John Galt and wife, Miss G. Galt, C. A. Glover, W. J. Halloran, Miss Halloran, Dr. Jesse Hawes and wife, S. Henry and wife, T. Holzhauer and wife, F. L. Hoogs, wife and child, H. Jacobs, Miss H. E. James, Miss B. Johnson, E. Kennedy, H. Kimball and wife, J. M. Levy, F. M. Lewis, J. P. McCoy, A. Rawlins, Dr. F. J. Rayner and wife, Mrs. B. Rhodes, A. W. Rice, Miss H. T. Rice, B. W. Ripley and wife, Dr. R. F. Sandow and wife, Miss M. B. Simonds, F. M. Smith, C. F. Solomon, C. S. Sponer and wife, J. B. Stetson, wife, child, and maid, E. F. Sweeney, Miss L. A. Tisdale, E. A. Von Armin, Charles Wall, C. B. Welmer, Miss Dr. Wells, J. M. Whited, A. W. Wilson and wife, G. H. Winston.

ANNUAL MEETING CHANGED.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of Olaa Plantation was held this morning at the chamber of commerce. The only business transacted was to change the time for holding the annual meetings from January to February 27, when the report of the manager will be read, and officers elected.

POSTERS FOR MASK BALL.

John Piver, the artist, has nearly completed six handsome posters for the mask ball. These posters will be exhibited in the windows of the various places where tickets are on sale and after the ball will probably be auctioned off. Mr. Piver also has a number of costumes which can be rented at the ball.
